FIRST YEAR SUCCESS

University of Mobile

The University of Mobile in Alabama is a private Christian institution serving 1,600 students and offering more than 40 areas of study, with 89 percent of the undergraduate cohort enrolled full time.

Communicate in a New Way

It's a celebratory moment to see an increase in prospective student interest and enrollment. It is also a challenge to follow through with leads, build relationships with prospective students, and create custom responsive communications on the fly. The institution initiated a search for a Constituent Relationship Management (CRM) system to streamline processes and improve overall efficiency. Prior to September of 2014, they would describe their CRM system as 'limited' in its functionality.

The Solution to a “Clunky” CRM

After researching platforms and completing a CRM pre-assessment, they chose Radius by Campus Management because of its user-friendly interface, ease of access, and the ability to move from a paper-based office to a digital one. In September of 2015, they went live with the solution for all programs.

Goals included:

- Increase overall efficiency and create transparency
- Empower enrollment counselors
- Improve and automate outbound communications

Faster, More Efficient Processes

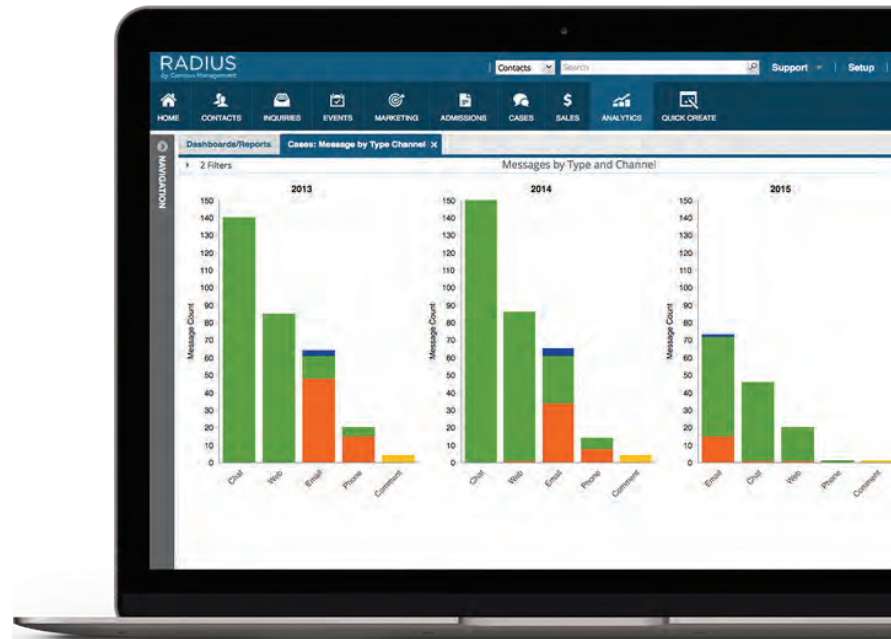

“We wanted more time-efficient plans and cost-efficient processes and we got that,” recalled Marie Batson, Associate Vice President of Enrollment Services. “The good thing about the solution was any time we saw a gap or need or we realized, ‘this is something important that is not being communicated to students,’ I was able to get something in within a day because we are so self-sufficient,” said Paige Hill, Communications Coordinator. What’s more, with a seamless process for events, the institution has seen an increase in event attendance. Staff no longer have to go to the office to run an attendance report, but can instantly see the numbers.

Empowered Staff, Transparency, and Mobility

By moving from paper to digital, instead of spending a day importing and processing applications, staff members can develop skills in other areas. Moving to a new solution created transparency for management and within the application process. Before using Radius by Campus Management, the Assistant Director or Director had to physically review and make decisions on all the files.

The application committee now uses the decision module to create unique views on their dashboard within the system and to sign off on a decision. Enrollment counselors can access documents at any time, providing the mobility they need. An admissions decision can now be made on the road. Other departments also see the changes in efficiency, resulting in increased campus-wide buy-in.

“We ran like a steam engine before, but it was constantly uphill and we were hoping for the right direction. This is like a major locomotive on a fast train with accurate GPS,” said Batson.
